

THE QUARTERDECK CLUB
NORTH SOUND, VIRGIN GORDA | BVI

Welcome to Bitter End!

My passion for the sea began at the age of 9, when I succeeded in nagging my seasick-prone father, Myron, into taking me deep-sea fishing in the Gulf Stream off Miami. It took some more nagging but thanks to Dramamine, the sea became a shared passion for our family. By the late sixties we were sailing the Caribbean aboard Alianora, a 1930s vintage Scottish-built ketch that we based in St. Thomas.

In those days, Bitter End consisted of what today is the core of our Clubhouse restaurant and bar, plus five sparsely finished cottages on the hillside. When Basil Symonette, a former St. Thomas charter skipper, had gotten the Bitter End up and running, he established some house rules. Visiting yachtsmen were welcome at the bar and restaurant but only at Basil's pleasure, which he communicated via bullhorn. The bar's opening hours were at Basil's pleasure as well; closing time was whenever Basil quietly slipped away to turn off the generator.

Bitter End became a regular port of call for Alianora when she was cruising the Virgin Islands, and by 1970, Myron and Bernice, my mother, were welcome ashore without a bullhorn invitation. On one of these visits, my mom asked Basil if he would sell or lease them an acre so they could build a tiny cottage. Basil didn't respond until the next visit, when he said, "You can't have an acre but how would you like the whole place?" When that message was relayed to me, I reverted to my 9-year old nagging mode. After three years of negotiation with Basil, we became owners of the ultimate family retreat.

Over the past 40-odd years, Bitter End has evolved from a rustic retreat for one family into a casual, friendly paradise for people of all ages from every corner of the globe. Our guests, like my family, are passionate about Bitter End's exceptional location and natural beauty, its welcoming character and crew, its serenity combined with its seemingly endless variety of activities on sea and land and, above all, its atmosphere of shared fun and adventure.

As a visitor to Bitter End, you become part of a community that extends the world over and is defined by a deep love for this singular place. On behalf of the Hokin Family and the crew at Bitter End, we hope to welcome you ashore.

Richard Hokin
